World Dignitaries and Humblest Citizens Pay Sad Tribute to Memory of Departed President; Train Now Speeding to Marion

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Warren Harding left Washington tonight, forever. His short eventful moment of power and heavy care was ended, his eternity of rest begun. Yesterday, the flooding tide of destiny bore him eastward to take up the challenge of leadership the millions of his countrymen had thrown to him. Today, that tide ebbed westward again under the setting sun. The singing rails bore him back to the quiet town in Ohio whence he came.

STRIKE AND BONUS UP

President Greets Delegations

Union Leaders Fear Quietness May Be Put on Plans for Coal Shortage

First Meeting With Cabinet Held Before Departure of Marion Train

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The coal situation and the soldiers' bonus issues were among subjects brought to the attention of President Coolidge today.

Former Senator Calder of New York urged the President to take immediate steps to prevent an anthracite strike. Representative Treadway of Massachusetts also discussed the coal situation.

A delegation of state commanders of the American Legion called upon the President after which William Doyle, Massachusetts commander, declared that Mr. Coolidge could be depended upon to support a soldiers' bonus. Mr. Doyle said as Governor of Massachusetts Mr. Coolidge was the first to sign a State bonus bill. It was indicated, however, that the President gave any assurance to the delegation today as to his attitude.

MEETS CABINET The President had his first meeting with his Cabinet. All the members of the Cabinet who are in the city met in the President's room at the New Willard Hotel before leaving for the railroad station late in the afternoon. It was stated that there was no discussion of public questions at the informal meeting.

Attorney General Clegg was in conference with the President for some time prior to the assembling of other Cabinet members. It has been expected that the Attorney General would be first to retire from the Cabinet but whether this question was under discussion was not made known. Inasmuch as President Coolidge

CONFESION WILL SHOCK FINANCIERS

Disclosures by Bucketeers Threaten to Rock Money Mart to Foundation

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Disclosures of so startling a nature that the financial section of New York will be shaken to its foundations, will be made when the confession of Edward M. Fuller and W. Frank McLean, bankrupt bucketeers, is made public, Carl E. Whitney, newly named counsel for the pair, declared today.

Facts concerning a "bucket-shop ring," with surprising political and business ramifications, were included in the confession made to United States Attorney Hayward, according to Mr. Whitney.

"My clients are now telling the truth about their affairs, a thing which they should have done a year ago," said Mr. Whitney. "Their disclosures are of a startling nature and are likely to rock the financial quarters to its foundations."

"In my opinion it would be unwise to make public the disclosures of Fuller and McLean at this time. This, however, will probably be done before the end of the week," he said.

The Federal grand jury will resume its sittings tomorrow and will be ready to go ahead with any word placed before it by the District Attorney's office in the Fuller-McLean case.

CALL CUNO 'SWINDLER' Passive Resisters Boo Statesman Proud Supermen Won't Deal With French as Long as Ruhr is Held

BRITISH STAND NOT LOOKED ON WITH FAVOR; GOLD LOAN IS TALKED OF

BERLIN, Aug. 8.—Passive resistance will be continued with all the strength of the German people "free from mad acts of violence and terror," and the people in the unoccupied territory will "support actively" those in the occupied regions, Chancellor Cuno asserted in addressing the Reichstag when it convened for a short extraordinary session today.

When the Chancellor rose to begin his long address he was greeted by cheering for some time by the Communists who greeted him with epithets such as "traitor," "swindler" and "the president of the German Company's board is going to speak."

One Communist Deputy got very excited, shook his fist at the Chancellor and was called to order twice. Herr Cuno was subjected to continual interruptions during the speech, which was received somewhat coldly by the public.

"If there is no light on the horizon which promises speedy help, then it is for us to keep alive by means of our own iron determination," said the Chancellor in his peroration, "and to make every sacrifice in this we must rely solely on ourselves. We stand alone and must and will help ourselves."

Chancellor Cuno reviewed the internal and external situations and, alluding to the British draft, said that the principles upon which Great Britain based her proposals really were not pleasant for Germany.

REPLIES TO ENGLAND There were many suggestions in the draft which appeared impossible to the German government, so far as it was able to judge without knowledge of the supplementary documents, asserted the Chancellor, adding that in an endeavor to maintain good relations with her comrade-in-arms of yesterday, England had gone extrajudicially in her concessions to the French standpoint.

"It is not our business," declared Herr Cuno, "to speculate on what England considers her interests, and we are not so foolish to imagine sympathies for Germany where there are none."

EMPHASIZES DANGER Emphasizing the danger and the futility of conjectures pending the publication of the British documents, the German Chancellor said that the only thing certain was that there was no reason for any great hopes. Nevertheless, he added, the German government cannot abandon the belief that economic common sense and a sense of justice will eventually prevail in foreign countries.

"Germany must be prepared for a long period of suffering," he added, "and to accommodate itself to such circumstances and not expect to work wonders. We must believe in ourselves and manifest that belief not by fatalistic resignation, but by determined action."

FRENCH PRESTIGE "The world knows we are ready to take into account French prestige if France ceases to impose humiliation merely for the sake of humiliation, but what we cannot and will not do is to abandon German law and betray our fellow-countrymen."

Alluding to France's demand for cessation of passive resistance before she is willing to open negotiations or say what she wants, the Chancellor emphatically declared that it was impossible to ask the people of the Ruhr and the Rhineland to abandon their sole weapon unconditionally, and he contended, even were the German government to attempt this impossibility, nothing would be achieved, because behind one impossibility there would soon arise an endless chain of other impossibilities by which French policy blocks the way to understanding.

"What we cannot do, and will not do, is to abandon a German people."

Body of Departed President Proceeds on Last Trip to City From Which Nation Called Him

ON BOARD HARDING FUNERAL TRAIN, BALTIMORE (M4) Aug. 8.—They were taking Warren G. Harding home tonight—away from the capital and its full-given honors to his friends and home folks of Marion.

They—his sorrowing widow and those who were his chief advisers in the leadership of the nation—formed the escort on the last journey to Marion.

The others on the funeral train were the members of the party who left Washington in June on the ill-fated trip to the Pacific Coast and Alaska. Mr. Harding personally had asked that those who had traveled with Mr. Harding on his last trip in life make the last journey with him in death.

A succession of the scenes that marked the trip from San Francisco to Washington—the silent throngs, the honor guards of former service men and the continual

Advices Men to Pick Wives by Their Feet

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Feminine beauty lies in just feet rather than in the features, Dr. F. E. Hayden, retiring president, declared before the National Association of Chiropodists today.

"If the young man who proposes to the lady of his heart would deprecate a photograph of her arches instead of a portrait of her head this world would be full of happy marriages," he declared.

Dr. Hayden asserted he had examined the pedal extremities of 166 candidates at the University of Kansas and found only two perfect pairs, one possessed by a Chinese.

WILLS FUND TO DELVE IN SPIRIT LAND

Stanford University Gets Bequest to Continue Study of Psychic World

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Aug. 8.—The chair of psychic phenomena at Stanford University today received a bequest of $400,000 from the estate of Thomas Welton Stanford of Melbourne, Australia—a brother of the late Leland Stanford, founder of the university. The fund will be used in an effort to establish fully whether there is any merit in the contention of many persons that the living can communicate with the dead.

Prof. John Edgar Coover, who has been head of the department since its foundation at Stanford several years ago, declared that from the research work done by the university there is no truth in the theory of communication between the living and the dead. His statement was first to retire from the Cabinet but whether this question was under discussion was not made known.

Before his death Stanford delved deeply into the subject and professed implicit belief in the power of communication between the living and the dead. It was because of his great belief in spiritualism and his desire that its teaching should be recognized by scientists that the Stanford University chair of psychic phenomena was established.

During nine years of research work Prof. Coover declared many purported psychic happenings had been investigated. In many of the happenings there had been circumstances which to the lay mind would indicate there existed the power of communication between the living and the dead. But his investigation, he added, had convinced him nothing had happened which could not be attributed purely to natural causes by the scientific mind.

The bequest received today was made by Thomas Welton Stanford nearly three years ago, but the money had been held in Australia for a higher rate of exchange by university trustees. The total amount which Stanford donated to the university now totals approximately $400,000.

COOLIDGE REWARDS HERO

Faithful Soldier of World War Will Go to Marion as Guest of New Commander-in-Chief

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—President Coolidge today rewarded a fighting man's loyalty to a Commander-in-Chief. The fighting man was Michael A. Donaldson of Haverstraw, N. Y., a Congressional Medal of Honor man and until recently a sergeant in the One Hundred and Sixtieth Infantry. The Commander-in-Chief was Warren G. Harding.

The reward was an unexpected opportunity to attend the burial services at Marion, as the guest of the new President.

Donaldson isn't a word painter. Today he couldn't tell newspaper men just what his feelings for President Harding had been. But he decided to come to Washington to pay tribute at today's funeral ceremonies. It took some pinching to find the train fare, but

Pet Bear Runs Amuck; Shot in Owner's Home

REDWOOD CITY, Aug. 8.—A large brown bear of the home of Thomas Pennington, wealthy San Francisco iron manufacturer, near Belmont, broke its restraining chains today, ran amuck for an hour and was finally shot and killed by Pennington in the living room of his home.

The bear had been a pet at the Pennington home for a year and to today was docile and friendly. It suddenly became wild today and entered the Pennington home. J. W. Cole, a gardener, followed it and attempted to lead it from the house. It cuffed Cole to the floor and he fled for his life. Then Pennington killed the bear with a shotgun.

Golfing Stars to Tee Off at Griffith Park

Exhibitions by leading Southern California amateur and professional golfers will mark the opening of the new turf golf course at Griffith Park, Saturday. The original plan was to formally dedicate the new links last Saturday, but owing to the death of the late President, the opening was postponed one week.

The public will not be allowed to tee off Saturday, but Sunday the course will be open, and golfers will be given a free rein. A green fee of $1 will be charged those who play the new links, while those who cling to the old course will be charged but 50 cents.

President Ed Tufts of the Southern California Golf Association will present the course to the city at 1 o'clock. Mayor Coyer will accept the links, speaking for the golfers of Los Angeles. Mrs. Martha McCann, president of the park commissioners will host the festivities. Immediately following the dedication exercises George Thomas, designer of the new course, will drive the first ball.

A foursome of amateurs will then tee off, closely followed by a quartet of the south's leading professionals.

have entered the affair and the keenest sort of competition is anticipated.

The tournament, originally scheduled for a three-day run, has been revamped and all of the ecutive Warren G. Harding. The preliminary events are scheduled for today, and the final competition for Saturday.

Many local sportsmen and anglers are expected to witness the one of the best of its kind ever held in Southern California.

Monday evening the participants in the local affair will leave for Denver where they will take part ent from the Atlantic seaboard and

Fast Program Promised at Athletic Club

Johnny De Rita and Eddie Gleason meet tonight in the main event of the Los Angeles Athletic Club boxing show. De Rita, prior to an illness which compelled him to give up the game for over a year, was rated as one of the best men of his weight in the entire club. Two months ago in his first appearance following his illness, he knocked out Henry Cruz in the first round.

De Rita, fighting in the welterweight class, won the high honors in a title tournament staged while the National Guard was in summer camp at Gilgig, Cal., recently.

Eddie Gleason has fast won his way to the fore in local boxing circles. He has always fought in the featherweight division, and tonight's battle will mark his first appearance in a lightweight encounter. Gleason is a fast, clever boy, and knows how to fight with both hands.

Other scraps on the eight-bout bill arranged for the entertainment of club members and their guests are as follows:

Al Leonard vs. V. Costa, 135 pounds.
Ray Palmer vs. Fred La Barre, 115 pounds.

VILLA TRAINS WITH DEMPSEY

Two Champions Are Using the Same Camp

Flyweight 'Is Working Hard for Lynch Bout

Gov. McCray Cancels Firpo
Contest

(EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH)
SARATOGA SPRINGS (N. Y.)
Aug. 8.—There are two world's champions in the Dempsey training camp. They are of extreme opposite types and it is the first time in the history of pugilism where two stars eat and train in the same camp. They are Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, and Pancho Villa, who holds the title of three-time champion of the world. Dempsey looks like a giant over the mid-weight fighter and when the two are seen together it is a striking contrast.
Dempsey is to fight Luis Firpo in New York September 14, and Villa is matched to battle with Joe Lynch next month in Philadelphia.

There is very little training being done as far as Dempsey is concerned, while Villa is hard at work going through his daily stunts of road work, boxing and bag-punching. A new ring will be constructed for Dempsey before he starts training. The old ring which first was used years ago by K. O. Brown of Chicago is not strong enough for the heavyweight.

(EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH)
INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 8.—The scheduled set-up match tonight between Luis Angel Firpo, the South American heavyweight champion, and Joe Downey of Columbus, was cancelled by Gov. McCray, following protests against holding the fight before the funeral of the late President Harding at Marion Friday.

"It would be a disgrace to the name of Indiana to have an affair like this happen while the body of President Harding lies unburied," McCray said. "Under these circumstances it would be a black spot on the name of Indiana."

The Sheriff of Marion county has been ordered to block any attempt to hold the fight.

Giants game here yesterday.

the Cincinnati club, received a telegram from President John F.
Heydler, who was in Chicago for the day, stating that Luque was suspended for violation of the playing rules.

Luque, in the eighth inning of yesterday's game, rushed from the pitcher's box to the Giants dugout and aimed a blow at Casey Stengel.
Stengel ducked the blow. Further trouble was averted by players and park policemen interfering.

SOLONS OUTLUCK BENGALS

Rod Murphy's Error Donates Senators Two Runs in First Inning; Siglin Hits Home Run

BY ED O'MALLEY

Well, Sacramento braved Vinton four horsemen to three runs yesterday, thereby annexing the second straight game of the present series. The contest fairly sparkled with classic plays most of which were performed by Hilltopian McGinnis. His work around the short field was of the half-raising order. "Excelsior" is the battle cry of the Golden State Senators. They never look back. Onward they prance in all their doings. On the bases they are regular Mexican beans—they are never quiet.

In trying to make a travesty out of Bengal defensive work yesterday, they overthrew the mark especially in the sixth inning. It was here that Hemingway grew perturbed, straying, dashing from second to third right under the vigilant lamps of Frank Maginnis. For his temerity and cock-eyed assurance he died ignominiously at the hands of Master Warner. We have another name for this sort of base stealing—it is called suicide. It is a sure way to a sure end.

TALL REDWOOD That tall redwood from the heart of California, Master Frough, as cocky a mortal (when the cards are running right) as ever swung an arm on a batter's mound, dealt over for Charlie Pick's pennant winners in pose. As a front runner Big Bill is a regular diamond man of war, but let the going get just a little rough and let several good batters move up on him and look him straight in the eye, then Bill suddenly changes to a Smithy Kane.

PADDY DOES IT Eddie Mauer's grin and worries and should have had the ring around his neck. Even with the misadventure fielding in the first frame, Eddie looked like a sure winner until Paddy Siglin and his little pig bobbed up in the first of the ninth. Every time Paddy brings that aid porker to Los Angeles he plays hobbes with his bludgeon. This animated ham was raised on the banks of the river Shannon and has pressed his lips against the Blarney Stone.

With the score 3 and 3 in the first of the ninth, Paddy loaded a croover far into the upper ether that gracefully arched the top of the score board and, when last heard from, was on its way to San Francisco to greet Francis Patrick Shanley, the great fifty-fifty apostle (ed.).

CAN'T BE DONE Eddie Mauer sighed. "It can't be done," said a Vernon run in the ninth, when the night looked darkest, almost made him regret his heresy. We always take keen delight in registering superlatives of yesteryear, so here goes. The vast concourse was edging its way toward the many exits when Paddy ambled to the plate. Don looked over or overlooked two good ones.

NOTAS LOCALES
Terribles Incendios Forestales
Manifestan las autoridades del Bosque Nacional de Santa Bárbara que se sería la situación creada allí por el incendio. Durante el día las llamas se han extendido a gran distancia río arriba del Siqúe, por la sierra de San Rafael, hasta la cumbre de la sierra de Santa Inés, y varios ranchos quedan dentro de la zona de peligro, entre ellos el gran rancho del Paso de San Marcos. El inspector de Bosques, Chester Jordan, del Bosque Nacional de Santa Bárbara, calcula que han ardió más de 20,000 acres, y la única esperanza de contener las llamas esta noche se basa en que cambien los vientos, pues los azaradores se declaran impotentes. Ya está el incendio dentro de los límites del refugio de la sierra de Santa Inés, y las llamas siguen caminando rápidamente hacia el suroeste, lo que hace más grave el peligro a lo largo de la región superior del río de Santa Inés.

Testimony for Wife of Songbird in Divorce

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Mister Edward Gallagher, who lived a hard life singing the same old tune over and over again in concert with his partner, Mister Shean, always sleeps late, generally until well after noon. This was one of the details of his private life brought into the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, today, when Mrs. Gallagher appeared to ask Justice Carwell for an absolute divorce.

Mr. Gallagher did not appear to contest the action. He appeared only in the testimony of Thomas De Vasey, a stout, good-natured motion-picture director, known who told of Mr. Gallagher's love for snoozing well into the day and also of finding two strange women in Mr. Gallagher's flat while the actor was still asleep.

RELATES VISITS
Mrs. Gallagher was in court and testified briefly that she married the actor in 1916 and that he seemed to tire of her completely after he became famous and Broadway started whistling his song.

De Vasey testified to visits to his friend, Mr. Gallagher. Both visits he said were at noon and both times Mr. Gallagher was asleep. De Vasey admitted that Mr. Gallagher had awakened and chased him from the room but

EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH
On the second visit De Vasey said he encountered a different woman. On this visit he was accompanied by Edward M. Webster, of 123 West Twenty-sixth street, who also testified.

"Well, what did you see?" the attorney asked of Webster.

"There (they were) again."

"Who is they?"

"Eddie and a woman."

"The same woman?"

"No, a different one."

"Was that at noon?"

"Sure, Eddie always sleeps late. Why shouldn't he?"

Justice Carwell reserved decision after placing in the record that under a previous separation agreement Mrs. Gallagher was to receive payments aggregating $21,000.

The Little Warrior

BY P. G. WODEHOUSE

The opportunity for a private conversation with Freddie did not occur immediately. For ten minutes he remained alone on the stage, absorbing abusive tuition from Mr. Miller, and at the end of that period a further ten minutes was occupied with the rehearsal of the number with the leading lady and the rest of the male chorus. When, finally, a roar from the back of the auditorium announced the arrival of Mr. Goble and at the same time indicated Mr. Goble's desire that the stage should be cleared and the rehearsal proper begin, a wan smile of recognition and a faint "What ho!" was all that Freddie was able to bestow upon Jill, before, with the rest of the ensemble, they had to go out and group themselves for the opening chorus. It was only when this had been run through four times and the stage left vacant for two of the principals to play a scene that Jill was able to draw the Last of the Rockies aside in a dark corner and put him to the question.

"Freddie, what are you doing here?"

Freddie mopped his streaming brow. Johnson Miller's idea of an opening chorus was always strenuous. On the present occasion, the ensemble were supposed to be guests at a Long Island house-party, and Mr. Miller's conception of the gathering suggested that he supposed house-party guests on Long Island to consist exclusively of victims of St. Vitus' dance. Freddie was feeling limp, battered, and exhausted; and, from what he had gathered, the worst was yet to come.

"What are you doing here?"

"Oh, ah, yes! I see what you mean! I suppose you're surprised to find me in New York, what?"

"I'm not surprised to find you in New York. I knew you had come over. But I am surprised to find you on the stage, being bullied by Mr. Miller."

"I say," said Freddie in an awed voice. "He's a bit of a nut, that old man! He reminds me of the troops of Midian in the hymn. The chappies who prowled and growled around. I'll bet he's worn a groove in the carpet. Like a jolly old tiger at the zoo at feeding time. Wouldn't be surprised at any moment to look down and find him biting a piece out of my leg!"

Jill seized his arm and shook it.

"Don't ramble, Freddie! Tell me how you got here."

"Oh, that was pretty simple. I had a letter of introduction to this chappie Pilkington who's running this show, and, well, he's got tolerably pally in the last few days. I went to him and asked him to let me join the merry throng. I said I didn't want any money and the little bit of work I would do wouldn't make any difference, so he said 'Right ho' or words to that effect, and here I am."

"But why? You can't be doing this for fun, surely?"

"Fun!" A pained expression came into Freddie's face. "My idea of fun isn't anything in which jolly old Miller, the bird with the snowy hair, is permitted to ruin. Something tells me that that lad is going to make it his life-work picking on me. No, I didn't do this for fun. I had a talk with Wally Mason the night before last, and he seemed to think that being in the chorus wasn't the sort of thing you ought to be doing, so I thought it over and decided that I ought to join the troupe too. Then I could always be on the spot, don't you know, if there was any trouble. I mean to say I'm not much of a chap and all that sort of thing, but still I might come in handy one of these times. Keep a fatherly eye on you, don't you know, and what not!"

Jill was touched.

"You're a dear, Freddie!"

"I thought, don't you know, it would make poor old Derek a bit easier in his mind."

Jill tremed.

"I don't want to talk about Derek, Freddie, please."

"Oh, I know what you must be feeling. Pretty sick, I'll bet, what? But if you could see him now!"

"I don't want to talk about him!"

"He's pretty cut up, you know. Regrets bitterly and all that sort of thing. He wants you to come back again."

"I see! He sent you to fetch me?"

"That was more or less the idea."

"It's a shame that you had all the trouble. You can get messenger boys to go anywhere and do anything nowadays. Derek ought to have thought of that."

Freddie looked at her doubtfully.

"You're spoofing, aren't you? I mean to say, you wouldn't have liked that!"

"It shouldn't have disliked it any more than his sending you."

"Oh, but I wanted to pop over. Keen to see America and so forth."

Jill looked past him at the gloomy stage. Her face was set, and her eyes sombre.

"Can't you understand, Freddie? You've known me a long time. I would have found out by now that I have a certain amount of pride. If Derek wanted me back, there was only one thing for him to do—come over and find me himself."

"Rummy! That's what Mason said, when I told him. You two don't realize how dashed busy Derek is these days."

"Bug!"

Something in her face seemed to tell Freddie that he was not saying the right thing, but he stumblled on.

"You're no notion how busy he is. I mean to say, elections coming on and so forth. He doesn't stir from the metrop."

"Of course, I couldn't expect him to do anything that might interfere with his career, could I?"

"Absolutely not. I knew you would see it!" said Freddie, charmed at her reasonableness. All rot, what you read about women being unreasonable. Then I take it it's all right, eh?"

"All right?"

"I mean you will toddle home with me at the earliest opp. and make poor old Derek happy?"

Jill laughed discordantly.

"Poor old Derek!" she echoed.

"He has been badly treated, hasn't he?"

"Well, I wouldn't say that," said Freddie doubtfully. "You see, coming down to it, the thing was more or less his fault, what?"

"More or less?"

"I mean to say . . ."

"More or less!"

Freddie glanced at her anxiously. "He was not at all sure now that he liked the way she was looking or the tone in which she spoke. He was not a keenly observant young man, but there did begin at this point to seep through to his brain-centers a suspicion that all was not well."

"Let me pull myself together!" said Freddie warily to his immortal soul. "I believe I'm getting the raspberry!" And there was silence for a space.

The complexity of life began to weigh upon Freddie. Life was like one of those shoes at squash which seem so simple. All you go to knock the cover off the ball, when the ball sort of edges away from you and you miss it. Life, Freddie began to perceive, was apt to have a nasty back-spin on it. He had never had any doubt when he had started, that the only difficult part of his expedition to America would be the finding of Jill. Once found, he had presumed that she would be delighted to hear his good news and would joyfully accompany him home on the next boat. It appeared now, however, that he had been too sanguine. Optimist as he was, he had to admit that, as far as could be ascertained with the naked eye, the jolly old blage might be said to have sprung a leak.

He proceeded to approach the matter from another angle.

"I say!"

"Yes?"

"You do love old Derek, don't you?"

"I mean to say, I love him, what I mean, love him and all that sort of rot?"

"I don't know!"

"You do know! Oh, I say, come now! You must know! Pull up your socks, old thing—mean, pull yourself together! You either love a chappie or you don't."

Jill smiled painfully.

"How nice it would be if everything were as simple and straightforward as that. Haven't you ever heard that the dividing line between love and hate is just a thread? Poets have said so a great number of times."

"Oh, poets!" said Freddie, dismissing the game with a wave of the hand. He had been compelled to read Shakespeare and all that sort of thing at school, but it had left him cold, and since growing to man's estate he had rather handed the race of bards the mitten. He liked Ross Childers' stuff in the Sporting Times, but beyond that he was not much of a lad for poets.

"Can't you understand a girl in my position not being able to make up her mind whether she loves a man or despises him?"

Freddie shook his head.

"No," he said. "It sounds dashed silly to me!"

"Then what's the good of talking?" cried Jill. "It only hurts."

"But—don't you come back to England?"

"No."

"No, I say! Be a sport! Take a stab at it!"

Jill laughed again—another of those grating laughs which afflicted Freddie with a sense of foreboding and failure. Something had undoubtedly gone wrong with the works. He began to fear that at some point in the conversation—just where he could not say—he had been less diplomatic than he might have been.

"You speak as if you were inviting me to a garden party! No, I won't take a stab at it. You've a lot to learn about women, Freddie!"

"Women are run!" conceded that perplexed ambassador.

PRaises LOCAL PUBLIC DANCES

Fenton Bott Finds Minor-Age Ordinance Obeyed

Only City, He Says, Where Law is Enforced

Suggests Playing of Better Ballroom Music

"Los Angeles is the only city in the United States where the minor age ordinance, 18 years, is absolutely enforced at a public dance hall," said Fenton Bott of Dayton, O., national chairman of the reform committee of the American National Association Masters of Dancing.

"I think the managers and supervisors of the public dance halls are entitled to credit," added Mr. Bott. "The system of references they require, never admitting a new dancer until he has been recommended by a previous dancer, is a commendable one until it is proved by the records that the dancer is a good one."

ABSOLUTE BAR

"Those under the age limit can not enter a public dance place," said Mr. Bott. "They are sent home, after having given their address, until the managers or supervisors can look up their references."

"This law is being enforced, according to Mr. Bott, by the members of the Los Angeles Ball Room Proprietors and Managers Association."

"Detroit, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Chicago and numerous other cities have the minor age law but no where is it enforced in the manner in which it is carried out in this city," he said.

"The American National Association Masters of Dancing through its reform committee, according to Mr. Bott, is seeking to raise the standards of the public dance through the right sort of music."

"We are asking dance hall managers and supervisors to have only the right kind of music played," said Mr. Bott. "We desire that every dance center eliminate objectionable dancing that is created through these lousy slow blues numbers."

"We are asking every place to have a standard of music, an evening. The waltz music has a refining influence that is not so apparent in the fox trot. One can notice a decided change in what appears to be a respectable dancing crowd the minute a jassy blues number is played. I have seen it demonstrated in the dance halls of Los Angeles and San Francisco several times the last few weeks."

Mr. Bott is in the city attending the normal school and fortieth annual convention of the dancing association. Discussions of many reform movements will be taken up at the convention of the association.

FEARS WIFE MAY INJURE HIS CAREER

Husband Asks Injunction to Prevent Her Carrying Out Asserted Threats

To prevent his wife from following out her asserted threat to injure his reputation with his employers and business associates, Joseph B. Williams filed suit yesterday in the Superior Court for an injunction against Mildred M. Williams.

Williams, who is a Coast representative for an eastern firm, asked that his wife be prevented from making his hotel, and from communicating with his business associates here or in the East.

Declaring that his wife had a violent temper, Williams stated that she used profane language before strangers and that she had threatened to telegraph his employers that he was no good and so ruin his business.

If she is not restrained, Williams asserted that he feared his wife would carry out her threats and cause him financial loss and irreparable injury. The couple were married October 3, 1921, and have separated several times in the last few months. The most recent separation taking place the 2nd inst., the complaint stated.

LADDIE BOY, IN PATIENT GRIEF, BIDS LAST GOOD-BYE TO HIS DEPARTED MASTER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Laddie Boy said his last good-bye to his master in the East Room of the White House this morning and there may be some hard hearts who will say that a dog couldn't know, but it seemed to those about him as if he did.

Mrs. Harding, who loves Laddie Boy no less than her husband did, told the attendant in whose special charge the pup has been, to take him to the East Room for a moment to see him as he went to go.

Already he sniffed the heavy air, fragrant with the fragrance of the flowers, blown solemnly around the blue lying under the great crystal chandelier, and poked his nose in the corners, as if looking for the master he knew was there but couldn't see, and then turned brown eyes on the White House attendant with an inquiring look which was too much for them to endure without their own eyes turning misty.

Laddie Boy knew his master was back in the House, but he seemed to sense that for some reason he could not find him, and like a good dog he concluded there was nothing to do but go back to his favorite spot and wait, faithful to the end.

ACCUSED OF FRAUD DEAL IN COLORADO RAILROAD FRANCHISE CANCELED

Man Arrested at Venice Said to Have Collected $150,000 Cash and Notes

An elaborate stock fraud through which he is asserted to have obtained $150,000 was operated at Antonio, Colo., by Charles J. Beer, according to charges on which he was yesterday brought here from Venice and lodged in the City Jail pending extradition.

Beer was arrested by Detective Lieutenants Williamson, Christian and Thompson at Venice, where he is said to have been under surveillance since he fled from the Venice police for some time.

Dispatches from Denver assert Beer's victims at Antonio, Mexico, and Spanish ranchers, whom he told that the Americans were trying to oppress them, and that if they purchased shares of the Utah Shale and Metal Company they would become wealthy and thereby escape the oppression of the Americans.

According to the Colorado authorities, the stock is valueless. Beer is a man of about 40 years of age, 5 feet 10 inches tall, and has dark hair and eyes. He is said to have been in the city since he fled from the Venice police for some time.

NEW PLAN FOR FOREIGN GOODS

Collector Will Not Hold Up Entire Shipments

Only Questioned Goods Are to be Delayed

Scheme is Expected to Prove Great Aid Here

Los Angeles merchants have won their fight to eliminate delay in delivery of shipments from abroad, according to announcement yesterday by Collector of Customs Schwabe.

Mr. Schwabe has worked out new methods of handling imports, which are expected not only to relieve congestion at the appraiser's stores, but to put shipments into the hands of merchants almost at once.

Previously it has been the rule to withhold entire shipments when a small part of any consignment appeared to be wrongly classified, until the whole shipment could be examined and certified.

The plan of Collector Schwabe, which he will effect Monday, will provide that, where a portion of a shipment has been improperly classified and the wrong duty paid, the balance of the shipment will be withheld for further examination, and the remainder will be released immediately.

But this privilege will be extended only to reputable importers who make an affidavit that the portion of a shipment has been improperly classified and the duty paid, but must also agree to have the entire shipment examined and certified.

The change in the method of handling imports is one that will appeal to local merchants. Under the new arrangement importations are expected to move more quickly and satisfactorily at the local customs house.

The present tax rate of Los Angeles in the current fiscal year will yield $12,429,204, which, with allocations to the library and street work, will leave $11,336,452.32, according to a statement by the City Auditor yesterday.

The status of the city's finances is explained as follows:

The assessed valuation of non-operative property on which taxes for the conduct of the business of the city are levied for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1923, and ending June 30, 1924, amounts to $994,336,335.

The provision of the charter amendment raising the tax limit to $1.25 and allocating $1.00 for street improvements, will leave $11,336,452.32, according to a statement by the City Auditor yesterday.

LOCAL FIRM PURCHASES STEAMSHIP
City of Los Angeles Is Taken Over From United States Shipping Board

The palatial steamer City of Los Angeles, one of the largest passenger steamers of the Pacific Coast, which has been operated by the Los Angeles Steamship Company in the Hawaiian service, has passed into the hands of that company from the United States Shipping Board, it was announced yesterday at the Shipping Board office at Los Angeles Harbor.

The purchase price is said to have been something less than $1,000,000, and represents about one-third the cost price of the vessel when she was built in 1909.

The City of Los Angeles, largest vessel sailing from Los Angeles Harbor, is of 23,000 tons and is 335 feet long. She formerly was the North German Lloyd vessel Bremer Kurier, and was taken over by the Shipping Board during the war. She has been in the hands of the Shipping Board for the last twelve months.

Resigns as Secretary of Picture Producers
Exposition Promoter Out of Cinema Company

While Mr. Reynolds admits severance by his relations with those enterprises, he refuses to go into detail concerning his reasons. "Last April," he said, "I came to the conclusion that I should direct all my efforts toward effecting the success of the Exposition, and at that time tendered my resignation as secretary of the Motion Picture Producers' Association and as secretary and treasurer of the Cinema Merchants Company."

Mr. Reynolds' resignation from the Motion Picture Producers' Association was accepted yesterday. He had been secretary of the association since 1919. He was also secretary and treasurer of the Cinema Merchants Company, which was organized to supply the exhibitors of motion pictures with anything and everything required, was promoted by Mr. Reynolds several years ago. It is said that until his resignation, he has been actively engaged in connection with it. But when questioned regarding his reasons for resigning, Mr. Reynolds refused to make a statement other than to say that "any statement made by me from the board of directors" regarding his resignation, "is a matter for the board of directors to decide."

Members of the board of directors of the Motion Picture Producers' Association were equally reticent regarding Mr. Reynolds' resignation. "We were members of the Motion Picture Producers' Association," they said, "and we were not responsible for his resignation."

It was learned, however, that the Motion Picture Producers' Association favored Mr. Reynolds' resignation. The association's board of directors was divided on the matter. Mr. Reynolds' resignation was accepted by a majority vote of the board.

Supreme Court hearings in the much-discussed budget case closed late yesterday after an all-day session. All cases were taken under advisement and in all except one the petitioners were granted fifteen days to file briefs and the respondent granted ten for reply. In the single exception the petitioner stood on his argument.

In this single case it was informed rather broadly that the preliminary writ of mandate prayed for by the Western Shore and Lumber Company vs. Riley and there was not attempt to contest.

All of the cases were directed against Controller May L. Riley and petitioned that a preliminary writ of mandate issue against him. However the petitioners were directed rather at the budget amendment to the constitution, adopted in November, 1922, than at Riley directly and also were for the purpose of determining the scope of that amendment.

CRIME PREVENTION URGED
Chief Vollmer Declares Scientific Study Pressing Need of Checking Steady Increase

"Los Angeles should not find it necessary to send to Berkeley or any other city for a police official," said Chief of Police Vollmer in an address on "Police Administration" given yesterday before 500 teachers-students at the University of California, Southern Branch. "Our universities," he observed, "are able to furnish any number of courageous, intelligent men of character who, with proper training, would be capable of filling any office in the police department."

Admitting that in spite of all the police officers can do, crime increases in proportion to the growth of population, Chief Vollmer said that the people of the State are doing little in a scientific way to discover the fundamental cause of crime.

"In the end we will have to admit the program of the criminologists and deal with criminals as individuals and not as a group," said the speaker. "The heredity, environment and experience of all of us differ, and criminals are not exceptions to this rule."

Chief Vollmer said special emphasis on the need for closer observation of the child who is defective in any respect, or who comes from homes in which immorality or insanity is evident, shows tendencies toward abnormality or criminality, he said.

"The police should have records giving an account of every potential delinquent. Such statistics would be easily available, and it is needless to say that the police department should have the respect and co-operation of the school officials."

Sitting that all sciences are related in some measure to police administration, Chief Vollmer said that one difficulty which the police face is the lack of scientific study.

OFFICER'S ACTIVITY STUDIED
Traffic Man Declared to be Head of Well-Organized Gang Responsible for Recent Hold-ups

Further investigation into the asserted criminal activities of Traffic Officer H. E. Ward, taken into custody on a robbery charge Tuesday afternoon while directing traffic at the intersection of Pico street and Western avenue, was being made by police yesterday in the belief that the accused officer is responsible for numerous hold-ups reported here in the last few months.

Ward, according to police, headed a well-organized gang of bandits, using his position as a cloak for his operations. He is specifically charged with the robbery of Mike Arg's restaurant at 812 Ord street on June 30.

Miss Peggy Davis, 31 years of age, of 1011 1/2 Byram street, and James Price, her sweetheart, residing at 1215 1/2 Federal street, were also held in connection with the robbery.

In a statement to newspaper men and police yesterday, Miss Davis denied all complicity in the robbery. She admitted, however, that she was in the restaurant just before the hold-up occurred. She stated that she had been taken to the restaurant by Price, with whom she said she had been keeping company for about a year and a half. At the restaurant, she said, she was introduced to the officer by her escort. Ward was obviously intoxicated, she declared, and suggested to Price that they hold up the restaurant.

QUIZ STARTED IN GLASS CASE

Freeman Charges Prosecutor Aide Intimidated Him

McClelland Has Heated Talk With Witness

Officer Says He is Afraid of Being Killed

man. The matter previously had been cited by the City Prosecutor's office, which decided that Freeman was entirely innocent and had not signed the checks as Hansen declared he had. Freeman charges that Hansen's complaint to McClelland was a plot to dispose of him as a witness against Gardner.

McClelland telephoned to Hollywood station yesterday morning and asked that Freeman be sent down to see him. When Freeman was notified of the call he told Lieut. L. L. McClelland, Capt. Heath then being absent, that he was afraid to go to McClelland's office. On the captain's return, McClelland was ordered to accompany Freeman. Both officers entered McClelland's office at 2 p.m.

"Did you report the crime commission that I tried to intimidate you in the glass case?" McClelland asked Freeman, according to stories told by Freeman, McClelland and McClelland later.

"I reported to Capt. H.H. Capt. Heath and the crime commission what transpired in your office on the first occasion, and I wish to correct that statement," Freeman says he replied. "I reported that you tried to intimidate me regarding the Gardner case."

Much argument arose on this point, and strong language was used by Mr. McClelland, participants agree.

Freeman then says he told McClelland that he did not wish to stay in his office and listen to such talk, and made an effort to leave but was restrained by Lieut. McClelland, who said he wanted to get all the facts.

"I wonder why they get such news on the police department," Freeman quoted McClelland as saying. "I don't think you've got any business on the scene."

Freeman then left the room in a rage.

McClelland stated that his action in calling Freeman yesterday was prompted by a story which came to him through several channels, believed to originate close to the glass defense, that Freeman had made the accusation to the crime commission that he had been intimidated by McClelland in the glass case.

"I called him in to get the straight of it," said Mr. McClelland, "because I never heard of the glass case when I talked to him."

After being apprised of certain features in connection with the arrest of Gardner, Hansen's interest in the matter and Freeman's actions, Mr. McClelland admitted that his action had been ill-timed and that he acted toward Freeman without a thorough investigation of the matters pertaining to the liquor case.

"I'm ready to make an apology to the boy if I've gone too far," said Mr. McClelland.

"When Hansen came to here I knew nothing of the other facts in connection with the case," said McClelland. "I took the matter under investigation and was told by Hollywood officers—I do not remember who—that the Gardner case. From then I got the impression that Freeman used questionable methods in Gardner's case. When he came in here on the liquor case he started out to tell me what a wonderful policeman he was and I brought up the Gardner arrest to test his veracity. I might have been emphatic, but I don't remember telling him I'd send him to San Quentin or introducing him to the detective."

McClelland said that he might have inadvertently used the term "stool pigeon" referring to Freeman yesterday. He said he could not remember who told him of Gardner's arrest and declared that no one interested in the Gardner case had approached him. He also stated that his first interview was timed to antedate slightly the glass trial.

No complaint was issued against Freeman, McClelland said, investigation proving that there was no violation. Capt. Heath visited Mr.

McClelland shortly after the Freeman interview and informed McClelland of certain elements in the Gardner case which threw a different light on the case, Mr. McClelland said.

Gardner was tried last month before a jury, a disagreement resulting.

Gaston Glass, motion picture actor, and Louis Gansler, film director, with two women, were arrested by Freeman and two other officers in a Hollywood house last June on vagrancy charges. Glass was tried in July, Freeman being the most important witness against him. A disagreement resulted and the case was postponed.

Glass has temporarily retired from motion picture work, as his future depends on the outcome of the trial. The defense attorneys, Milton Cohen and Ray Chesbro, have made monumental efforts to win the case for their client.

BURGLAR QUITS JOB

Freddie Year Abandons His Work With Goal in Sight

FRENO, Aug. 8.—A burglar who evidently did not possess the quality of perseverance necessary to the completion of a difficult task, gave up an attempted safe-cracking after he had broken the dial and back from a safe at the home of J. P. Cackler, 432 Howard street, according to a police report. After evidently having given up the job in disgust, the near-yeasman left a punch, two chairs and two hammers which he had used. The Cacklers were in the mountains when the job was attempted.

No complaint was issued against Freeman, McClelland said, investigation proving that there was no violation. Capt. Heath visited Mr.

nephews when Vander Bogert entered the place, according to her statement to police. He is asserted to have attempted to engage her in conversation. Failing in this he is said to have awaited her coming outside the restaurant where he persuaded her to enter his automobile. He took Miss Constantine to her home, 1833 La Mirada avenue, and there was introduced to her sister. The sister had a message to deliver and asked Mildred to go to a drug store two blocks distant. Vander Bogert offered to take Mildred and she accepted after attempting to persuade her sister to accompany her. The sister refused and Vander Bogert and Mildred left the house in his automobile.

Instead of taking her home from the drug store, Vander Bogert is asserted to have taken the girl first to Magnolia Hill and later to a lonely spot in Beverly Hills, where the asserted attack is said to have taken place. Following this Vander Bogert took Miss Constantine to the home of his friends and left her there. The friends summoned police and Vander Bogert was arrested last Saturday.

Miss Constantine resides with her two sisters and is said to have recently arrived in Hollywood, coming from the South. A striking resemblance to the actress, Mildred Constantine, is said to have been observed by several officers from motion picture companies and was contemplating a film career. Yesterday at her home, it was stated that she was staying with friends and would remain in the city pending the outcome of the action against Vander Bogert. She was known in film circles as Miss Constantine. Vander Bogert was represented at the hearing by Attorney Andrew Brooks.

she said, she immediately left the restaurant and went home.

Detective Lieutenant Spenser and Ryan, who are investigating the robbery, assert that she has been implicated in many other hold-ups with Ward and Price. They are checking numerous reports of robberies in which women participated and believe that many of the victims will be able to identify her as well as the two men.

A coincidence was responsible for Ward's arrest. A few days after the robbery one of the men who had been held up in the cafe drove by the intersection and was struck by the close resemblance of the officer to the man who participated in the robbery. He reported the matter to the police and Ward was taken into custody. Foster and Price is expected in a short time when they are confronted by other victims.

Mr. Rosenbush advanced a brilliant argument in the opinion of attorneys present. In reply to certain of Mr. Burke's arguments, he stated that if it is accepted that the budget amendment wipes out special funds it means that the San Francisco Harbor and will automatically be wiped out. He also invited attention to the $19,000,000 collected annually through the motor vehicle tax and which goes to the State Highway Department. He said that the State Highway Department is not interested in the budget bill and asked what is to be done with the $19,000,000.

An interesting sidelight of the budget case, the fact that Phil Spring, others in the party include Congressman George Darway, Carl Vinson, Herbert J. Damm, Patrick Dweeney, James O'Connor, Francis Patterson, E. L. Davis, Robert Clancy and their families.

The Chaumont also has on board 480 troops for Fort MacArthur and the various army posts of the Corps Area. The Chaumont will take for San Francisco a number of men being transferred from the local post to San Francisco.

After making a complete survey of the naval and military establishments of the Pacific Coast, including San Francisco, Columbia River and Puget Sound, and a review of the United States battle fleet at Seattle, the Congressmen will return to this port on September 2, homeward bound.

ISSUES PROGRAM
Congressman Lineberger, chairman of the reception committee, issued a program of the two-day stay yesterday, emphasizing the fact that, on account of President Harding's death, all entertainment features have been canceled.

The party will reach the harbor at 8 a.m. today from Hampton Beach, N.H., and will be met by automobile to Long Beach, and at 10 a.m. will start a tour by boat of the Los Angeles Harbor under supervision of Admiral Goetz and Rear-Admiral Gregory. The party will lunch at noon at the California Hotel.

In the afternoon will make a survey of coast defenses at Fort MacArthur. At 5 p.m. the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce will entertain them quietly at the Hotel Virginia.

Friday morning the Congressmen will participate in memorial exercises for President Harding at the Beach. Congressman Gray of Pennsylvania and Congressman O'Connor of Louisiana will make brief addresses. Friday afternoon the party will make an official visit to Los Angeles, all arrangements for their entertainment being having been canceled on account of the President's death. They will leave for San Francisco Saturday at 8 a.m.

DRAMATISTS WILL MEET
The next regular meeting of the Los Angeles Dramatists and Musical Association will be conducted at 7:45 p.m. tomorrow at the Grand Avenue school. All members are requested to attend, as plans for the fall and winter work are to be taken up at this meeting.

COURT HEARS BUDGET CASES

ent of Public Instruction, praying a peremptory writ against Riley. The budget for 1923 called for an appropriation of 1 per cent of the maintenance of the administrative department of Wood's office. Gov. Friend W. Richardson struck this item from the budget on the grounds that it was a separate appropriation.

The arguments of both the petitioner and respondent hinged about this phase. The question argued was whether this was a separate appropriation of part of the original appropriation directed by the Legislature for educational purposes. Devlin and Devlin represented Wood and Robert Devlin presented the argument. Andrew F. Burke presented the argument for the Board of Education.

The case of the Railroad Commission vs. Riley next was called. This case occupied most of the morning session and ran far into the afternoon. Hugh Gordon and Carl L. Wheat represented the Railroad Commission and the former presented the argument. The petitioner showed that the former act of the Legislature, enacted in 1919, provides that all self-collecting commissions shall use funds collected by their departments for the upkeep of those departments. No more than the fees collected may be used and it was stated that at the end of the biennial period any surplus accruing shall revert to the general fund.

ARGUMENT BY BURKE
It was the contention of Burke that the budget amendment of 1922 wipes out all such special funds. This amendment, he declared, requires that all fees shall go into the general fund and only such income used as have been allocated through the appropriation act. To bear out this contention he cited the fact that otherwise excess funds of the department would be used so that they would not be available for general use and that the very purpose of the budget amendment was to re-allocate all funds possible.

In reply, Gordon stated that the mere fact that the budget was for general purposes did not repeal the previous act. He further pointed out that in case one of these self-sustaining commissions should enlarge, as, for example, the Railroad Commission, they would mean that after the appropriation had been exhausted it would, necessarily, mean the loss of the necessary appropriation is enforced.

The case of Kaiser vs. Riley was not argued. This is the case of the Board of Estate Board and is parallel to that of the Railroad Commission, excepting that one seeks to put money into a special fund and the other to take it out of such fund.

An interesting phase of the Real Estate Board case against Riley is that it was instituted by the state itself. Gov. Richardson being directly responsible for the petition being signed. Frank H. Austin and William F. McLaughlin, attorneys for the Real Estate Board, confined themselves to the presentation of a brief.

The final case heard was that of the department of examination and certification of graduates nurses against Riley. Anna C. Palmer, examiner, filed the petition. A. A. Rosenbush represented her.

PREVENTION OF CRIME IS URGED

have to encounter is the misconception on the part of the public in regard to police duties. "Many persons imagine that the duty of officers is purely punitive, but it should be remembered that prevention of crime is or should be, of prime importance," he said.

Tracing the history of police administration since the reformatory methods introduced by Robert Peel in London, the speaker told of the struggle in England and America to eliminate politics from the police departments and said that with the introduction of civil service reform a new and better type of officers has come into the departments.

Dwelling on the fact that most criminals are experts in their particular line of operation and using many cases to prove that each criminal has a special trade mark by which he may be identified, Chief Vollmer said that the modern methods of dealing with crime and criminals, including the Bertillon system and other improvements, have contributed greatly to the detection of law violators.

"For instance, the He-Detector, an invention of J. A. Larson, a California University man, has been of invaluable service," said Mr. Vollmer. "While it is not claimed that the He-Detector is invariably reliable it is much to be able to say that out of 1000 cases examined through the means of the He-Detector has scored 100 per cent success."

CHIEF STATES IDEALS
Stating his ideals as to what the police should be, Chief Vollmer said that in the first place more care should be taken in the selection of officers, that they should be employed to enforce the law should register at least as much intelligence as the commissioned officers of the United States Army.

"The policeman should know something about the law he is called upon to enforce," said the speaker. "He should understand something about first aid to the injured, he should know something about chemistry and as much as possible of other sciences. He should always be a gentleman with not only courage, but self-control, and it is never his business to speak harshly to unintentional law-violators, thus tempting them to become deliberate law-breakers. It is natural for a man to 'talk back,' even to an officer who is faulting in his manner or his language."

"While policemen should not be expected to be expert scientists, psychologists or diplomats, every officer should have a fair education and above all, should be a man of character, who considers himself a servant of the social body with which he seeks to co-operate for the betterment of the entire community," said Mr. Vollmer.

SOMETHING TO JAW ABOUT
 The American people are said to be paying more than $1,000,000 a year for gum. But this is not as bad as chewing the rag.

THE CONFESSION
 Every cloud has its silver lining. Where there is a plague of grasshoppers in the Middle West they don't have to worry about feed for the chickens.

AN ANKLE BITE
 The French people promise the world a safe, speedy and satisfactory airplane that can be sold for less than $200 in this country. But at that it is going to be some job to put Henry Ford out of business.

GERMAN PAPER
 Trade between Mexico and Germany is being extensively restored. Germany is already supplying Mexico with the largest portion of its paper supply, although last year the United States furnished 66 per cent. It must be that the Mexicans are accepting German marks as filling for their mattresses.

ROOM FOR ARGUMENT
 Senator Crampton insists that if the country had 50-cent beer we would have fewer deaths, much more revenue, much less drunkenness, much more respect for the law, much less dope and much more insurance in world affairs. But the Senator will never be able to make Col. Bryan and a few million others feel that way.

BANK WINDS UP
 The Austro-Hungarian Bank has closed its doors and gone into liquidation. For more than 100 years this was about the strongest financial institution in the Austro-Hungarian Empire. The stockholders received less than the equivalent of 10¢ a share in winding up the affairs, although the stock was worth more than $100 a share only a few years back. When nobody will take money what is the use of a bank?

GOING STRONG
 Over 25,000 documents were filed in the recorder's office during the month of July and most of these represent some transaction in reality. Deeds and mortgages were pooled through the window at the rate of more than 1000 a day, which is cause for world wonderment in a supposedly dull season. But there is no dull season in this section. The All-Year Club has attended to that and now the months all look very much alike to the visitor, the builder, the investor and the pioneer. There is no such thing as a dull day in business or in play.

KEEPING THE WORD
 Japan mildly makes the point that she is the only nation to accept the conclusions of the Washington conference in good faith. The conference looked toward progressive naval disarmament, but it is claimed that none of the governments—except Japan—has reduced armaments beyond the actual requirements of the treaties. Japan has not only fulfilled her obligations, but has gone much farther in breaking up her navy machinery. She has made cuts in her army and navy budgets that are due to the peace. Peace protesters have no complaint to make concerning the Japanese.

LADIES PROTEST
 There is no pleasing the ladies. Recently Austria took a census of her people and precipitated trouble for the politicians by listing housewives as "dependents." These women in their might said that the census taker was a household and a cook is very far from being a dependent, and they are victorious in their demands that the listing be changed.

THE CASE-TAKERS
 The case-takers retained that the modern inventions have removed the drudgery of housework, and a woman with all the latest appliances in the home can finish the work in record time. In the good old days which so many deplore she, of course, might be considered to earn her keep, considering that she toiled from dawn to dusk to long after the time the rest of the household were asleep. In return she got her living and a best dress once a year and a tombstone somewhat earlier in life than need be. Formerly it was said that a man usually buried two or three wives during the journey through this vale of tears, but now a glance at any fashionable hotel convinces one that the situation is exactly reversed today. It is a poor sort of hospitality that cannot host at least four widows for every widower.

BUILD THE PORCH
 Home building, apartment-house building, hotel building in Southern California goes on merrily and extensively with unabated activity. Yet in nearly all this time money amounting to billions of dollars has been expended in building a Union Terminal at the Plaza, in order that this community may have the best possible service at the hands of the three transcontinental systems that center here.

THE PUBLIC INTEREST
 It is axiomatic that the fundamental purpose of all law is to serve, promote and protect the public interest. When the private interest of any individual or minority group conflicts with the public interest the latter must take precedence; for the part cannot be greater than the whole.

Keeping this principle in mind, it becomes apparent that no good purpose would be served, but that injury to the public interest would result, if the Federal Department of Justice were to carry to the Supreme Court an appeal against the decision of the United States Circuit Court and an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission permitting the lease of the lines of the Central Pacific Company in California and Oregon by the Southern Pacific Company.

These companies have been united for a period of fifty-two years. In 1914 the Department of Justice filed a suit in the Federal Court to compel the Southern Pacific Company to cancel its lease of the Central Pacific lines, a matter of 2283 miles of railway, on the contention that the lease was contrary to the provisions of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law. And in May, 1922, the United States Supreme Court issued an order directing the Southern Pacific to "sever its control of the Central Pacific by stock ownership or lease."

The Southern Pacific Company filed an application with the Interstate Commerce Commission for permission to execute a new lease, on terms somewhat similar to those of the old. After an exhaustive hearing, in which nearly all the commercial bodies in California participated, the Interstate Commerce Commission made an order on February 6 of the present year authorizing the new lease. In the opinion accompanying this order the Interstate Commerce Commission said:

"Upon the whole record we find that the acquisition of control of the Central Pacific by the Southern Pacific Company, by lease and stock ownership as asked in the application, will be in the public interest."

Permission to make this lease was given under the terms of the Transportation Act, passed by the last Congress and taking precedence over any conflicting provisions of the Sherman Act. Granting an application based upon this order of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Federal Circuit Court gave a decision in May of this year releasing the Southern Pacific and Central Pacific companies from the obligation of going through the unscrupulous process ordered by the Supreme Court. But the Department of Justice possesses the right to appeal from this decision to the Supreme Court.

Whether that appeal shall be made rests with the decision of Atty. Gen. Daugherty. The right of appeal is unquestioned, also the right of the Supreme Court to reverse the Circuit Court and order the unscrupulous to proceed.

In an interview given to the Portland Telegram a few days before President Harding's death the Attorney-General said: "I expect to talk with the President regarding the future government action in the Central Pacific-Southern Pacific matter. I think we will decide at San Francisco whether it will appeal to the Supreme Court or abide by the decision of the United States Circuit Court. I think it will be possible for us to reach a decision in the matter before the President leaves the Coast."

But the hand of death intervened, and that talk with the President never took place. The Attorney-General must now consult President Coolidge or act on his own initiative.

No one who has read President Harding's address concerning railway consolidation, delivered in Kansas City on June 25, can reasonably doubt what his decision would have been. He then said that the public interest is the paramount consideration; and he expressed the opinion that this interest could be best served by the consolidation of the transcontinental lines into great units. Such a consolidation is that contemplated by the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission affecting the Southern Pacific and Central Pacific lines.

It was not upon its own initiative that the commission acted. It was memorialized by more than 100 commercial bodies in California alone to permit this consolidation to continue. Among them were the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce and Realty Board.

The government possesses the legal right to force the separation of the two lines. But that law is not mandatory. Under the Transportation Act the government can exercise its discretionary powers. The Interstate Commerce Commission recites in its order that separating the lines would necessarily impair the service and increase the cost of operation, which would be reflected in higher freight and passenger rates.

We have passed through the era of "trust-busting" as a favorite political sport; for we found that swatting the corporations merely because they were corporations meant swatting those who used the services the corporations afforded. Building up railroad systems, under proper government restrictions and regulations, is much more to the public interest than tearing them down.

Competing lines have given their consent to the removal of the lease, under the terms of the commission's order. It has been fully established that such a lease is in the public interest. By what moral right can the Department of Justice interfere?

The Times favors a renewal of the Central Pacific lease at this time because it believes that the tearing asunder of the two railroad systems, after they have operated as a unit for a long period of years, would be directly against the public interest. We are moved to this view in the interest of general service for exactly the same reason that we are opposing the Southern Pacific in its fight against the California Railroad Commission in the matter of building a Union Terminal at the Plaza, in order that this community may have the best possible service at the hands of the three transcontinental systems that center here.

THE PUBLIC INTEREST
 It is axiomatic that the fundamental purpose of all law is to serve, promote and protect the public interest. When the private interest of any individual or minority group conflicts with the public interest the latter must take precedence; for the part cannot be greater than the whole.

Keeping this principle in mind, it becomes apparent that no good purpose would be served, but that injury to the public interest would result, if the Federal Department of Justice were to carry to the Supreme Court an appeal against the decision of the United States Circuit Court and an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission permitting the lease of the lines of the Central Pacific Company in California and Oregon by the Southern Pacific Company.

These companies have been united for a period of fifty-two years. In 1914 the Department of Justice filed a suit in the Federal Court to compel the Southern Pacific Company to cancel its lease of the Central Pacific lines, a matter of 2283 miles of railway, on the contention that the lease was contrary to the provisions of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law. And in May, 1922, the United States Supreme Court issued an order directing the Southern Pacific to "sever its control of the Central Pacific by stock ownership or lease."

The Southern Pacific Company filed an application with the Interstate Commerce Commission for permission to execute a new lease, on terms somewhat similar to those of the old. After an exhaustive hearing, in which nearly all the commercial bodies in California participated, the Interstate Commerce Commission made an order on February 6 of the present year authorizing the new lease. In the opinion accompanying this order the Interstate Commerce Commission said:

"Upon the whole record we find that the acquisition of control of the Central Pacific by the Southern Pacific Company, by lease and stock ownership as asked in the application, will be in the public interest."

Permission to make this lease was given under the terms of the Transportation Act, passed by the last Congress and taking precedence over any conflicting provisions of the Sherman Act. Granting an application based upon this order of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Federal Circuit Court gave a decision in May of this year releasing the Southern Pacific and Central Pacific companies from the obligation of going through the unscrupulous process ordered by the Supreme Court. But the Department of Justice possesses the right to appeal from this decision to the Supreme Court.

Whether that appeal shall be made rests with the decision of Atty. Gen. Daugherty. The right of appeal is unquestioned, also the right of the Supreme Court to reverse the Circuit Court and order the unscrupulous to proceed.

In an interview given to the Portland Telegram a few days before President Harding's death the Attorney-General said: "I expect to talk with the President regarding the future government action in the Central Pacific-Southern Pacific matter. I think we will decide at San Francisco whether it will appeal to the Supreme Court or abide by the decision of the United States Circuit Court. I think it will be possible for us to reach a decision in the matter before the President leaves the Coast."

But the hand of death intervened, and that talk with the President never took place. The Attorney-General must now consult President Coolidge or act on his own initiative.

No one who has read President Harding's address concerning railway consolidation, delivered in Kansas City on June 25, can reasonably doubt what his decision would have been. He then said that the public interest is the paramount consideration; and he expressed the opinion that this interest could be best served by the consolidation of the transcontinental lines into great units. Such a consolidation is that contemplated by the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission affecting the Southern Pacific and Central Pacific lines.

It was not upon its own initiative that the commission acted. It was memorialized by more than 100 commercial bodies in California alone to permit this consolidation to continue. Among them were the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce and Realty Board.

The government possesses the legal right to force the separation of the two lines. But that law is not mandatory. Under the Transportation Act the government can exercise its discretionary powers. The Interstate Commerce Commission recites in its order that separating the lines would necessarily impair the service and increase the cost of operation, which would be reflected in higher freight and passenger rates.

We have passed through the era of "trust-busting" as a favorite political sport; for we found that swatting the corporations merely because they were corporations meant swatting those who used the services the corporations afforded. Building up railroad systems, under proper government restrictions and regulations, is much more to the public interest than tearing them down.

Competing lines have given their consent to the removal of the lease, under the terms of the commission's order. It has been fully established that such a lease is in the public interest. By what moral right can the Department of Justice interfere?

The Times favors a renewal of the Central Pacific lease at this time because it believes that the tearing asunder of the two railroad systems, after they have operated as a unit for a long period of years, would be directly against the public interest. We are moved to this view in the interest of general service for exactly the same reason that we are opposing the Southern Pacific in its fight against the California Railroad Commission in the matter of building a Union Terminal at the Plaza, in order that this community may have the best possible service at the hands of the three transcontinental systems that center here.

BUILD THE PORCH
 Home building, apartment-house building, hotel building in Southern California goes on merrily and extensively with unabated activity. Yet in nearly all this time money amounting to billions of dollars has been expended in building a Union Terminal at the Plaza, in order that this community may have the best possible service at the hands of the three transcontinental systems that center here.

well-known styles in our modern architecture. But we have nothing exclusively and absolutely California.

Spaniards, Moors, English, early Americans designed their dwellings in conformity with their climates. That is logical. Eskimos and South Sea Islanders do the same with their primitive huts.

In California we have a climate that is different and unique. It is as original as savages we should design dwellings different and unique, too, worthy of the climate that started us growing. But we don't. We copy the architecture of other ages and countries.

The first feature to strike the newcomer that California is essentially an open-air, out-of-door country. Doctors and hygienists agree that to live as far as possible out-of-doors and in the open air is the way to be healthy and wealthy and wise. Here is a direct tip on designing a dwelling to be characteristic of California.

It should be largely an open-air, out-of-door habitation. Yet so far our sole concession to our climate is to add a sleeping porch on rare occasions to a house designed in other particulars to match the Maine woods or the Moorish desert or the fogs of old England.

Some years ago we met a man from New York who had the right idea about the typical California house. Like all newcomers he was crazy about the climate. He said when he built his home he was going to put nearly all he had into a porch. He was going to make that porch as nearly perfect as a porch could be. Whatever indoor rooms were necessary he would stick around that spacious porch as unobtrusively as possible.

From the outside, he said, his home would resemble a bower of roses and vines and honeysuckles, rather than a conventional house.

He had the right idea; to build the house around the porch rather than the porch around the house. He ought to have developed into a big California leader. But we lost track of him and have never found the ideal California home he proposed to build.

It seems only too evident that he became "eccentric" before he got started. But it is not too late for some bright newcomer to build for us a type of dwelling that shall not be Moorish or Spanish or Hindu or colonial or Elizabethan, but altogether Californian.

SILENT MEN
 At the present time the characteristic of President Coolidge most deeply impressed on the American people is his brevity of speech. There are men, of course, who are silent because they have nothing to say. There are, however, a great many more who are laconic for the same reason. Other things being equal, the man who speaks in a few words and at the same time gets his meaning across.

Calvin Coolidge belongs to this class of thinkers. He has the gift of pithy expression. He is never prolix. In conferring on him the degree of Doctor of Laws at Amherst College President McKechnie complimented him on his "adequate brevity."

RIPLING RHYMES
THE OLD MAN
 James Jigsmith's daughter, Ida Jane, adored a youth named Wooley Wood; her father, who is safe and sane, protested that he was so good. "No doubt, my dear, you'll go your ways and wed the skate for later days, but little grass, their counsel's sound, would not give ten cents a bunch for spring salad like this Wood's lot; he has no pep, he has no punch, you'll find he is not worth a hoot." But Ida Jane was satisfied that she was wiser than her dad, so Wooley took her as his bride; the license took his final seal. One evening Ida Jane went back to that old home that knew her best; she sought again her father's shack and fell a-sleeping on his breast. A kind of sparkling tears she shed until the parlor floor was moist; "Cut out the brine," her father said; "you're back again—my heart's rejoiced! You could not bear your heavy cross and so you come again to me; your husband proved a total loss, as I predicted he would be. I shall slap you on the wrist, but I must say it would be great if dippy daughters would but list when fathers would their platform state. If damself only would believe that parents know a thing or two they would be harder to deceive when thimble-lovers loom in view. But parents' wisdom has no weight and parents quite a nuisance are, when there comes warbling to the gate some sleek with a cheap guitar."

those whose profession it is to talk. But outside this group—and sometimes, indeed, inside it—the great leaders are mostly men of few words. They were never glib when time was the essence of the contract. A great soldier must perforce be brief.

William the Silent, that sturdy son of Holland, who saved The Netherlands from the yoke of Spain and laid the foundation of the Dutch republic, was a shining example of what the adequately brief can accomplish.

Oliver Cromwell was another leader who changed the government of a country by actions unadorned with speech. When he made himself dictator of England he merely pointed to the speaker's mace in the Parliament House and exclaimed, "Take away that bubble!" No rhetoric, no flow of oratory, so explanations for the Puritan soldier.

Bismarck, again, who bound the loose Teutonic federation into a solid empire, obtained a maximum of results with a minimum of talk.

Some of our most efficient legislators have been men like Senator Crane who made themselves felt rather than heard. Even those who have employed the gift of oratory to win the hearts of the people live in a few concise, sharp sentences, not in the impassioned, flowery peroration.

The greatest speech in history consisted of but 267 words and took only three minutes to deliver. But it gave the American nation a "new birth of freedom."

And the simplest soul can read, mark, learn and inwardly digest the greatest sermon ever preached in about twenty minutes. Yet the sermon on the Mount contains all that has ever been said since in the subjects of religious thought, conduct and political economy spread out over wearisome square miles of printed paper.

Nobody is going to find fault with President Coolidge for his "adequate brevity."

RUBBING IT IN
 In Seattle a burglar added insult to injury by hanging up an $18 telephone bill against home he had invaded. After he had assembled the family jewels he sat down and indulged in a twenty-minute phone conversation with a fellow-burglar in a distant city.

If you or any relative or friend is worried because of varicose veins, or because the best advice that anyone can give is to get a prescription that many physicians are now prescribing.

Ask your druggist for an original two-ounce bottle of Moore's Emerald Oil (full strength) and apply night and morning to the swollen, enlarged veins. Soon you will notice that they are growing smaller and the treatment should be continued until the veins are of normal size. No penetrating and powerful is Emerald Oil that dissolves the entire vein and causes them to disappear. It can be secured at any pharmacy. (Advertisement)

A form letter was decided upon. It must be typed and sent by those hasty messengers to whom traffic signals are taught, and who menace the life of the mere pedestrian at any hour of the day. A stenographer was called, and appeared beside the desk. She was so little, so very young that the memories of babyland

IMPORTANT NOTICE

Readers of this column who address inquiries to Dr. Peters must not expect replies unless they are willing to comply with the simple rules of the department. Stamped envelopes inclosed with inquiries for replies must be self-addressed. It is impossible for Dr. Peters to take time to address several hundred envelopes each day. Furthermore, it is often impossible to make sure of the correct spelling of your name; a great many replies have recently been returned undelivered because of this. Write your name, street number, city and state in full on an envelope, stamp it and inclose it with your inquiry. Otherwise, it will be impossible for Dr. Peters to consider your request for information.

"Dear Doctor Lulu: I am quite a young school girl and am quite sure I am seven months over weight, and so all the low figures require slim figures I am extremely anxious to reduce. I don't want you please help me. I am just 13 years old and weigh 135 pounds. Just imagine, I am rather tall, (five feet two inches) but even so I don't want my school clothes to hang under my arms. I want to be slim enough to wear a self-addressed envelope. But let bygones be bygones—I'm sending another."

"It has quite often been said that carrying will make one thin, but it doesn't seem to affect me so. I just recently discovered that the mentality of my mind is the key to this. I have been thinking of my mind as being the key to my body. I am now a sophomore in high school, and in all my classes I have received a 'B' but I fear I shall get one on my next report. But graduated from high school with honors and I want to do the same, but I keep on worrying over this affair. I doubt very much if I shall be able to do it."

"There is still another thing which bothers me. It is my detestable pug nose. I bought a new face a few days ago, hoping that it would make my nose half-way decent, but it seems to do it in a breathing effort. I don't breathe through my nose, I only do when I am sleeping. Do you think I can do away with my nose? I can't change my nose, but I can change my nose's position. I shall be glad to hear from you.

NOVELTIES, IDEAS AND PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS

Up-to-Date:
The knitted bracelet for carrying the handkerchief. This addenda to the sports or street costume, may be either in vivid contrast to the dress, matching hat, hose and belt; or it may blend with the handkerchief chosen as its companion.
To disclose a bright contrasting petticoat, either fitted or lace bedecked, at the slit of your new, tight-skirted frock. This undergarment match the color of your stockings, or it may sing solo, as you elect.

Buddy Gowns

As we fingered the posted crepes, so dainty and colorful, Jean and I discussed their extreme usefulness for summer wear. "Especially when traveling," said she, "or visiting where one does not like both carrying and fussing laundry. One may just twist them out in warm water, or even cold, and out comes every trace of dust or mussiness." "Yes," I agreed, "I have had the clever idea about them. Jean makes her own and little Janet's from the same material. Not only does this economize in cutting, since the tiny one fits well into the curves of Mother's gown, but they look so cunning—the was one and the other of larger mould." And we both chose an ample supply of the cool, so-livable cotton, saving money at that big summer sale.

Window Shading

Window shades need no longer be matters prosaic, copying the same color of the house either inside or out. They may be as fanciful as one desires and still not emerge from that good taste and correctness so essential to real home-making. In rooms where it is best to exclude light, two sets of shades may be installed—a dark one for the exterior and a lighter one for the inside effect. White, cream color, or any tint harmonizing with the room and its furnishings may be selected and if something very decorative is cared for, lace medallions may be inset, or, inserting, either broad or narrow, may be placed along the lower side of the shade. White or matching fringe, also may be used along the lower edge of the shade, but not both lace and fringe, if one would adhere to proper restraint. In a room where color is needed to lend pep, glazed, colored, or even painted shades are excellent for shades and so charming are many of the designs in these, that they actually enliven one's spirit. Especially are these adaptable for the morning room, where the early sunlight playing through their lavish coloring, is enchanting.

Efficient Housekeeping by Laura A. Kirkman CANNING YOUR CUCUMBER PICKLES

Tomorrow's Menu:
Breakfast—Orange, cereal, coffee, dropped eggs, toast.
Luncheon—Cheese soufflé, lettuce sandwiches (made with whole wheat bread), tea, cookies.
Dinner—Fried butterfish, yon-nis potatoes, scalloped tomatoes, lettuce, coffee, raisin pie.

Last week I wrote about pickling cucumbers by the old-fashioned "pickle jar" method. Today I am going to deal with putting cucumbers in sealed glass jars. To can small cucumber pickles: Wash and wipe two quarts of small, unripe cucumbers. Put them in a stone jar and cover with a boiling brine made of water, let stand for twenty-four hours. Then heat in the same brine to near boiling point, drain, wipe the cucumbers and cover with cold water. Bring them to the boiling point in this water, drain, then cook a few of them at a time for ten minutes in two quarts of cider vinegar boiled with two red peppers cut small. If you wish a sweeter pickle, you may add a cupful of sugar to this vinegar. You may also add mixed spices to it. Put the cucumbers right into sterilized glass jars, from the boiling vinegar, and when the jar is full, add enough of the hot vinegar to rise to jar-top, then adjust a new rubber put on cover, and completely seal. Invert to test for leaks while the jars are cooling, then label and store. If a jar is found to be leaky, simply sterilize another jar and transfer the pickles to it. To sterilize the glass jars: Wash the jar and its glass top; place it on a rack in a pan. Cover with cold water, and heat this water gradually to the boiling point, allowing it to boil for fifteen minutes. Remove jar from water, drain and keep it hot until you put the hot pickles into it. (Otherwise it is apt to crack.) Some women keep the jars hot by wrapping them in towels wrung out of hot water. Also be sure to keep the hot jars out of a draught. Of course it saves a good deal of trouble if you test your empty jars for leaks before filling them with the food to be canned. To do this, partly fill the jar with cold water, put on a new rubber, place glass over it, and clamp down side wire so as to seal completely. Then invert it and let stand on its glass cap for some time. If the jar is imperfect it will show signs of leakage. In that case, do not try to use it—although sometimes the wires can be bent so as to remedy the trouble.

Shoes That Set Off Trim Ankles

Truauk Shoes are lovely shoes in keeping with the best dictates of fashion—designed to set off trim ankles and to becomingly complement the most stylish and charming apparel. Yet, Truauks provide absolute comfort. A cushion of resilient rubber built into the heel absorbs the shock of impact in walking. A flexible shank gently and evenly distributes the weight—checks any tendency to cramp, and gives a pleasant lift to the instep. This store will be closed all day Friday, August 10th, as a mark of respect for the memory of our late President, Warren G. Harding.

TAKES WOMAN'S PURSE Man Then Flees and Is Lost in Downtown Crowds

Dodging in and out among the afternoon crowds at Seventh street and Broadway yesterday, a white man about 25 years of age succeeded in snatching a pocketbook which he snatched from Mrs. P. R. Hope, 7248 Santa Fe avenue. The purse contained $11.50 in currency and some checks, it was reported to police.

Mrs. Frank Johnstone, 483 California street, reported to police yesterday that a white man, answering the description furnished by Mrs. Hope, snatched from her arms a bundle containing a coat suit which she had just purchased. The man darted into a downtown building and she was unable to follow him, Mrs. Johnstone said.

Council Sells Harbor Bonds to High Bidder

The City Council yesterday sold $2,500,000 worth of harbor bonds to Drake, Riley & Thomas, one of five concerns bidding. The selection of the highest bidder was a highly complicated proceeding. The Auditor's office estimated that Drake, Riley & Thomas made the best bid. By it the city will pay an average interest of about 4.75 per cent. The bonds were sold on the recommendation of the Finance Committee, of which Councilman Muesel is chairman. The premium was $2457.

No More Gray Hair—Says Science

Wonderful Clean, Colorless Liquid Restores Original Color Results in a Week

Science again has scored a triumph in the discovery of a very remarkable liquid known as Kolor-Bak. If you are gray, just apply this liquid to the hair and scalp and your hair will soon take on the actual color it had in the past. Not a trace of grayness will remain.

Kolor-Bak comes in the form of a clean and colorless liquid, containing properties which quickly restore the lost color to the hair and give it renewed vigor. And note that the one preparation is for all colors of hair. No special solution required for each color—no samples of hair required.

You will find also that with Kolor-Bak the hair has the same shade throughout. It does not appear streaked, faded or "died." Every scientist, every physician, knows that gray hair is hair that has ceased to receive its normal supply of coloring matter or pigment from certain tiny cells (called follicles or papillae) in the scalp, because these cells have become inactive from illness, shock of some kind, scalp disease, sandruff, infection, neglect of the hair, or lack of circulation, etc. But no matter what the cause of the grayness, it is simply amazing to see how it disappears when Kolor-Bak is used. It is a real substitute for the natural pigmentation.

Animal Link Too Queer to Name

Bedtime Story-teller of Six Million Years Ago Saw It Frequently

South American Specimen Now in New York Something Like Kangaroo

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—One of the missing animal links which connects the present age with that which flourished 6,000,000 years ago, about the time the Heidelberg man of the Pleistocene age was getting up on his hind feet to walk, has been brought back to this country by Dr. Wilfred H. Osgood, chief curator of zoology in the Field Museum of Natural History in Chicago.

Prof Osgood has just completed a nine-months' exploring trip in Argentina, Chile and Patagonia in which he collected more than 3000 specimens of animals and bird life. Included among them is an animal so rare that it has no name. Only twice before in the history of zoology has it been noted and one of these discoveries was made by Dr. Osgood ten years ago.

IN PREHISTORIC AGE
The only resemblance to this animal is found in fossils of a prehistoric age. The only living animal today to which it might possibly be a distant relative is the Australian kangaroo. Both possess the two long sharp incisor teeth and both have the pouch in which the female carries its young. But in the case of the South American creature the pouch is atrophied to a degree and is no longer used for that purpose. The marsupial animal, however, is its only relative.

About fifty years ago a South American Indian brought in the remains of such an animal and its resemblance created a sensation similar to that when the origin of man was split into two camps.

Then Dr. Osgood discovered one himself ten years ago in Venezuela and his observations are being summed up in a book.

DEER SIZE OF CAT
In discussing his new finds today at the American Museum of Natural History, Dr. Osgood pointed out several odd species, some possibly a new genus, many extremely rare. One that would create a new style in ladies' pets if it could be found in big enough quantities is the pygmy deer. It is about eighteen inches high, weighs about a pound and is about as small as a medium-sized cat. It is the smallest of the deer world.

"I had a tiny fawn," said Dr. Osgood, "the loveliest, daintiest little creature, as graceful as a kitten. It is called the 'pygmy' deer."

It was asked if it is like the tiny antelope of Africa.

"No," he replied, "it is a true deer."
